

CRASHED BANK BEFORE CAUSED NICKLE GLOOM

Ontario's Attorney-General Has Unhappy Memories of the Failure of Farmers' Bank

In future years, when the Home Bank crash will be but a thing of history and a subject for reminiscence, Hon. W. F. Nickle, K.C., Ontario's attorney-general, will be cherishing the memory of the role which he is now playing as the director of the government's opposition against the bank officials. Such a memory, however, will not be the only one abiding here.

wrecked bank which Mr. Nickle will be carrying with him to the collapse of the Farmers' Bank in 1910. The figure of the minister of finance, that is to say, the man who, for purposes of convenience, was called upon to pay the collection, was equally impressive. The year of the crash, he was forced to compensate the shareholders of the Farmers' Bank, Mr. Nickle had contracted to purchase the shares of his bank's stock, but when it was time to make the payment, he instructed Mr. Nickle to fight the matter in the courts, but judgment there went against him, and he was forced to buy the shares.

At the time he proposed to Mr. Nickle that he should give him the two shares of stock, which he had been forced to purchase in New York, a few days later he arranged for one of his constituents to be a member of the shareholders. The next development came with the collapse of the bank. Not only did he have to pay the dividends which he had received, but he was also called upon to pay the double liability in respect to the shares which he had accepted.

The Ontario attorney-general looks back with a fortunate appreciation of its humorous side, and he laughingly told us as he left the room when banking experience became a subject for conversation because of the Home Bank failure.

Played Policeman to Black Bass Prisoner

J. S. Martin's Ready Repartee Saved Him a Fine

LONG before Hon. John S. Martin, minister of agriculture in the Ontario cabinet, had his present responsible position, indeed, before he even thought of entering political life, he was a devoted follower of Isaac Walton.

One day, while fishing in the lake, he hooked a large and fighting specimen of the black bass. Now as it was out of season, and the future cabinet minister was a strict adherent of the law, he threw the fish back into the stream, but to his chagrin, it came up again and took the hook again. This time Mr. Martin slipped the line through its gills and left it to splash about with other captives.

In a short time the game and fish warden came into the lake and decided to pay the anger of an official visit. They had to pull it from the water rather unmercifully and seeing the forbidden black bass he growled: "You're a bad boy, you have been catching the bass out of season."

"No, governor," came back the instant reply.

"That fish is a thief, he has been stealing my line, and I'm going to catch a plating policeman and have him up with me when he has finished."

Then I'll let him go, on suspended sentence, until the season opens."

He was not served with a blue paper.

CHARLIE'S EARLY STRUGGLES

IT is not easy to "shake off" the average American reporter, but the mother of the one and only Charlie Chaplin accomplished the feat quite easily—and also, it be said, quite unconsciously.

Hardly had she set foot in New York on a visit to the States, when the inevitable newspaper man tracked her down.

"Stop, madam," he said, producing his notebook and pen, "we have come to learn something of the early struggles of your distinguished son."

"What do you know about my Charlie's early struggles?" inquired the old lady.

"Exactly, madam."

Mr. Chaplin thought hard for several seconds.

"I am afraid I'll have to disappoint you, then, young man," she said at last. "Charlie had no early struggles, he has never had any, except that he always made a good deal of fuss about having his face washed."

OMAR SUFFERS ECLIPSE

"HAVE you ever changed your mind?" an English paper recently asked H. L. Wee Stagpole, the well-known novelist, and he replied:

"I have changed my mind about Omar Khayyam and his poetry. I am sick of the jar of wine beneath the bough, and the sick of the Paradise snow, and the life's shadow about me, and the whole bag of tricks. I prefer even dear old Omar to the world. I prefer the world to the big drum to the tune of 'I am sick of the jar of wine, what's in it?' Omar, whom I used to love, has left me deflated—he can't pump me up any more. His life's a series of successes, but he's been like a bottle—falsely decked in flowers—also sugary, and I've lost my sweet tooth."

"Thirteen" Unlucky is Belief of Premier King

Old Superstition Upsets an Ottawa Dinner Party of Cabinet Ministers

HON. W. L. Mackenzie King, Premier of Canada and the members of his cabinet are evidently superstitious, a dinner party of thirteen.

Just before Mr. King left Ottawa for England, after the Imperial conference, now in progress, he was the dinner guest of the dinner party at the Royal Ottawa Golf Club dinner, given by the members of his cabinet.

When the dinner was about to start, it was found that the gathering totaled exactly thirteen, as were the members.

There was a hurried conference and the prime minister and Dr. Maclean, minister of the interior, were the only ones who came out of the private room. The farewell dinner was to be held, and began to look around. The first person they saw was Christian Smuts, of South Africa, one of the most striking men at the conference. On the right is shown a picturesquely Indian delegate, the Maharajah of Alwar, just stepping out of the door.

UNITED STATES REPRESENTATIVE
 Knill-Burke, Inc., 122 South Michigan Boulevard, Chicago, and Brokaw, Blodg, 42nd St. and Broadway, New York City.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1923

THE POWER BEHIND THE THRONE

Governor Walton has been suspended by the Oklahoma State Senate. That may not count for much unless the Senators can also suspend the pay of the State Militia.

AN AGE OLD PROBLEM

What the management of the wheat pool have been trying to discover is how to "pool" the wheat of the province without having control of either the wheat or the elevators. A good many men have wrestled with that problem during the last five or ten thousand years, but most of them who have thought they had figured out the conundrum and who backed their calculations with their money went "broke." Perhaps Mr. Wood and his associates can succeed where so many have failed. And in any case they are not risking their own money—or wheat.

WESTERN SHIPMENTS MULTIPLY

Fifteen million bushels of wheat have been booked for export by way of Vancouver, and it is confidently expected that sixty millions of the Alberta crop will pass through that port by Spring. The total amount handled last year was under twenty million bushels. The western route is therefore doing business at three times the rate it did last year, and the recent ten per cent reduction in freight charges has hardly had time to affect the tonnage figures seriously. The total Alberta crop is estimated at 157,000,000 bushels. On the basis of that calculation two-fifths of the crop is practically certain to go to market via the Pacific.

WHY THE HOSTILITIES?

There are seven counts in the impeachment bill against Governor Walton of Oklahoma, and if the Legislatures are going over his record again to see if they overlooked anything. Meantime the Ku Klux Klan and its doings seem to have dropped out of sight. And as yet neither side appears to have raised the question of why there is such an organization in the state, and why it has attained such large membership, wide influence, and power to administer "punishment" to alleged wrong-doers in defiance of law and authority. Whether the Governor or the Legislature is responsive, the inference seems clear that if the state authorities had been enforcing law properly there would have been no chance for the Klan to attain any such dominant position, because there would have been no reason why it should gain public sympathy and standing. And the conclusion is probably not far wrong that the Governor and Legislature both had a hand in bringing about the present situation, by interfering with the course of justice or neglecting to see that the state officials did their duty.

ANOTHER WESTERN REPRESENTATIVE

The new Solicitor General was elected in North Winnipeg, by a majority so large that two opponents lost their deposits and the third escaped the same fate by a margin of eleven votes. It is customary of course for cabinet ministers to be returned at the qualifying by-elections, but the rule is not inviolable. That has held in this case will react favorably upon the prestige of the Government in the West, while the addition of another western member to the Government will tend to equalize representation between the old and new halves of the Dominion. That is a matter of some importance, quite aside from party considerations. The West cannot afford to miss any opportunity to secure its full measure of ministerial representation. The defeat of Mr. McMurtry would have been a small scale repetition of the mistake of 1921, when prairie electors made it all but impossible that Federal departments directly related to Western settlement and development should be administered by men having the western point-of-view.

ANOTHER SHORT-LIVED REPUBLIC

The revolution on the Rhine seems to have followed the course of Von Kahl rebellion. Berlin claims that the separatists have been ousted from control of the cities which they captured so easily on Saturday, and that the "republic" is dead. If the Rhinelanders prefer to stay in Germany there is no reason why the Allies should worry. France would, hail the creation of a Rhenish buffer state as another barrier against its traditional foe, but unless fully prevalent at the Allied Council Board, Germany will not have money, arms or time to plot another onslaught on France for generations to come. And it may be easier to bring a united Germany to time than to deal with two states, one of which would make strong claims to be given its debts in consideration of it having broken away.

BERLIN BREAKS THE SILENCE

Germany has formally applied to the Reparation Commission for permission to tell that body how much—or how little—it can pay in the way of reparations. That is the first definite step that has been taken in the direction of settlement for many months. France and Belgium seized the Ruhr district because at the rate Germany was then paying the claims would not be wiped out before the end of time. Since then Germany has paid nothing, while the other Allies have waited to see what would happen, with cordial and frequent assurances to France that they expected it to be something unpleasant and unprofitable. Chancellor Stresemann evidently saw cause to disagree with those British journalists who kept repeating the world that Germany was winning the economic struggle, for some weeks ago he advanced a proposal to post new guarantees of future payments if the French and Belgians would withdraw. Nothing came of that suggestion, save rejoinders to the effect that withdrawing was one thing and the French and Belgians had no notion of doing until passive resistance was dropped and cash forthcoming together with securities for future payments. Passive resistance was dropped, but the occupational forces stayed on. Berlin evidently has come to the conclusion that there is nothing to be gained by trying longer to "jolly" France and that the issue may as well be faced. Hence the appeal for permission to explain to the Commission why it cannot pay the full amount of the bill.

That the request will be complied with is to be supposed. It will hardly be refused at any time or under any conditions. The application is a fresh admission of liability, and implies a willingness to pay something. There would be little use in making the proposal unless Germany is prepared to offer some more satisfactory rate of payment than it was making before the Ruhr was seized, for France and Belgium would not withdraw their troops on those terms and recovery of the Ruhr is Berlin's objective. Germany cannot keep going industrially without the products of that great mining and industrial region. The experiment has been tried and failed. France and Belgium have to be bought out if they are to be got out. The gross amount of the reparations bill may be cut down, likely will be, but the process of liquidating it will have to be speeded up. Berlin understand that thoroughly, and on that it is useless to waste time in discussing on any other basis. Thanks therefore to the policy of France and Belgium, the Allies are in prospect of a new deal with Germany; involving perhaps a reduction of the total claims, but promising also something real and worth while in the way of payments, with any further and better securities that the Allied experts can get on.

The outlook is further improved by the consent of the United States to participate in a reparations conference. The importance of that is real and large, but should not be exaggerated. What Washington is offering Europe is the bone of its advice; nothing more. Mr. Hughes stipulates that the repub will assume responsibility for the outcome of the conference. Still less will it undertake to stabilize Europe at its own expense. Germany's debt to the Allies is to be the sole topic for discussion; and the Allies' debts to the United States must not be dragged in. In substance what Washington proposes is that it shall nominate delegates who will give the situation a "once over" and tell the Allies how much they think Germany can pay and when. Whether they will take the advice, and what will happen if they do or do not, the Allies will have to decide for themselves; and whatever they decide they will have to continue to remain to Washington on the present scale.

The British Government warmly welcomes the United States to the proposed gathering. Germany will no doubt agree, as the U.S. has no interest in the amount of the reparations bill. France may object for precisely the same reason. France is essentially practical. It has stood Berlin up against the wall and compelled it to offer to present plans for payment. It may not relish the idea of an outsider—who has nothing at stake—stepping in at this moment to offer an opinion as to whether the plans are acceptable.

In any case a conference seems to be definitely on the program, with the United States in it or not. And with France and Belgium emulating the man from Missouri and requiring to be "shown" why they should get out of the Ruhr.

WHAT PROHIBITIONISTS THINK ABOUT GOVERNMENT CONTROL

In 1920, when the Prohibitionists wanted us to abolish further importations of liquor into the Province, so as to give a better chance for their experiment to work out, this is the "ad" they ran:

THE BOOTLEGGER

What Shall We Do About Him?

The enormous price he bleeds his victims for makes it worth while for him to take the risks and bring law and order into disrespect.

THE REMEDY

Vote control of the Liquor Traffic under our own Provincial Government. Have our own Vendors only handle all intoxicants, dispensing

Pure Liquor in Sealed Packages

At Fair Prices

That will take the profit out of the Bootleggers' business and he will fade away.

Let's Do This

DOLLARS AND CENTS
 Do Not Always Express Real Values

Everything in life is not measured in terms of dollars and cents. You cannot measure the comforts and conveniences of natural gas fuel as you would weigh a pound of butter or count a dozen eggs. But there is real worth to you in the clean, quiet, efficient and economical service which natural gas fuel renders. A clean home with healthful atmosphere has real value to you. Using fuel which is instantly ready at all times for all kinds of service is more valuable to you than you have ever taken into consideration or thought.

—How many times will gas fuel this winter save you trips to the coal pile in the cellar for fuel?

—How many times will gas save you a cold walk out to the garbage can in the middle of a cold winter?

—How many times will the absence of solid fuels and ashes save you the trouble of sweeping the floors and dusting the furniture?

—How many times will gas fuel give you a warm bath, that you would either have to forego or take in cold water, if you did not have gas?

—How much money do you keep tied up in the cellar fuel pile, which gas will give you use of?

—How many visits to the furnace will a well-regulated gas burner save you?

—How much is a clean atmosphere, free of ash dust, worth to your health and comfort?

Every little thing is worth something to you, and much of it you cannot figure in coin of the realm, but the real service and real worth to you is there. It is because of these many economic conveniences that in millions of homes in America, where gas can be procured, it is used for fuel. No one who has ever had satisfactory gas service in the home would be without it. While this fine fall weather continues we can put in YOUR gas service, if we have not already done so.
